COFFEE OF MAGNIFICENT FLAVOR-ENJOYED BY EVERY 7th FAMILY IN AMERICA

ONLY THE RIGHT GRIND GIVES YOU ALL THE FINE FLAVOR

The brewing of good coffee is a simple matter just bringing ground coffee and hot water together for the right length of time. The time differs according to the type of coffee pot used. Some pots hold the water against the grounds constantly, some intermittently, some just passing through. Where the contact is constant the ground coffee should be coarse, where not constant the grind should be finer.

In the regular pot, boiling water is in constant contact with coffee, Have your A&P Coffee ground coarsa.

Percolators force water over the coffee intermittently, so use medium ground A&P Coffee in your percolator.

In drip pots water goes through the grounds only once, so have your A&P Coffee ground fins.

In vacuum puts the contact is briefest of all-up goes the water, down comes the coffee. Use A&P Coffee ground extra fine.

MULTIPLY this picture by 25 million, and you have a miracle such as the world has never seen before — a miracle which is unmatched anywhere in the world today outside America.

It is the miracle of 25 million people owning and enjoying a mechanism as complex and competent as an automobile.

In a single year — this year, for instance the industrial genius of America turns out some three million new cars—more than the total owned in any other country on the face of the globe.

Many things make this miracle possible — including the American railroads.

For mass production depends on mass transportation.

And what that means is this:

The materials needed for building automobiles come from every state in the union. Cotton must travel an average of 1,300 miles, copper 1,500 miles, wool 1,700 miles, lead 1,100 miles—iron and steel travel from mines to mills to factories where frames, bodies and other parts are made before arriving at the point where the cars are finally built.

Or to take it another way—for every working day, American automobile factories need 25,000 tons of iron and steel—450,000 square feet of plate glass—more than 900,000 pounds of copper. And for every car manufactured, it takes more than 2 tons of coal.

There are more than 17,000 parts in a single automobile — many of them made in widely scattered cities. One industrial writer has estimated that the materials in an automobile travel by rail an average of six times before the car finally rolls from the assembly line.

So the automobile industry has come to depend on the clocklike regularity of the railroads. Many plants handle parts straight from freight car to assembly line with no stored supply or "float" of motors, frames, wheels, transmissions or other parts on hand. This helps reduce the cost of your car.

Perhaps you have never paused to consider such facts as these—any more than you have realized that the food you eat, the clothes you wear, most of the things you use every day were brought together from every part of the nation by rail.

As a matter of fact, that's the finest tribute anyone could pay to railroad service. It works so dependably and smoothly, you almost forget it's there.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

"This Great Moment"

Sirs:

I read Mr. Luce's editorial This Great Moment in LIFE's Oct. 21 issue. I was impressed by its forcefulness. It hit me as being one of the strongest statements of the issues in this election that I have read. I read it a second time to convince myself that it was an editorial favoring Willikie's election.

We had some discussion about the editorial at home and I submitted it to a Roosevelt Democrat. He immediately stated it was a strong endorsement of Roosevelt.

It seems to me that you should follow that editorial up with something which will definitely show your position.

CARL KRUSE

Sirs:

My first reaction was that of being feeled. My second sensation was anger, which gave way to plty, with a tinge of discust, and finally wound up with a deep sense of puzzlement and disbelief! YOU—you whom I have quoted, whom I have looked up to, whom I have come to regard as an oracle, as a Solomon dispensing justice in your impartial, dispussionate dispensing of the news—you, who have never falled or flinched from fear or favor—you QUIBBLED!

What's the matter? This is still a free country, and free men can speak—if they have the courage of their convictions. What does it matter if you support Roosevelt or Wilkie—support of EITHER would be better than a straddle-the-fence, quibbling support of neither.

In my opinion, you have said too much not to may more. If you sincerely feel what your words imply, you owe it to your country, to the readers of LIFE and to yourself to may what you have so far left unsaid.

Sirs

May I add to your many letters of appreciation my own for Mr. Luce's truly great editorial in this week's LIFE. This Great Moment.

I doubt if anything so deeply stirring the American heartstrings and patriotism has been written since the inmortal Gettysburg address.

I had my family come to breakfast early this morning while I read it to them — my son of 40 and my grandson of 19. The gravity of their expressions would have shown you the spirit in which they listened—neither one politically minded but it will stay in their minds, I am confident, firmly planted.

Thank you sincerely for a spirit shown in this article, so fine, so serious, so deeply American, that it gives one courage to face all things for this country of ours.

Sirs:

Finding proper sources of Intelligent, constructive information to me has been quite difficult. Almost every public statement I read contains some place, if not a bold blased assertion, a veiled meaning of some kind motivated from a very biased attitude. This form of deception I despise.

I, therefore, in appreciation of such an honest, true, fair and square statement as you have-made, wish to congratulate you. No more honest assertion has ever been made, no truer statement could possibly be made, and it is perfectly fair and

The Campaign

So Wendell Willkie isn't a businessman, or so tays Mr. Bruce Bliven, in your Oct. 14 issue.

I my to this distinguished man that a man who takes over a billion-dollar corporation, adds hundreds of employes to his payroll, and over a period of seven years makes that corporation pay, reduces electrical charges to the consumer, extends that service to additional thousands and above all else, proves that this American way of life is not finished, is not just a businessman, he is a business genius.

Mr. Bilven brings out quite clearly that Willkie is willing to promise almost anything to almost anybody in order to get elected.... In ordinary street parlance the people think these promises are just so much baloney.

If Mr. Bruce Bliven cannot build a more substantial case against the man, Willkle should be our next President.

LOSE TO THE EAR. THE BALL IS RELEASED. FINGERS GIVE IT A FINAL SPIRAL TWIST

SPEAKING OF PICTURES . . .

THIS IS FOOTBALL SKILL

Like fine artists or mechanics, professional football players must be skilled craftsmen. It takes them years to learn their trade. Only by many many hours of practice can they learn to pass with bull's-eye accuracy, pust out of bounds within the 3-yd. line, snap the ball from center to quarterback with never a miss.

Here on these pages are shown in action some of the members of the New York Giants, professional team. The pictures were taken by Gjon Mili's fast-action camera. Because the technique of passing, punting, centering and drop-kicking is so perfect, the pictures might well be carefully studied by all football-minded youngsters. If they look at them long enough, then go out into the back yard and try to imitate them, they too may someday play for the Giants.

BALL FLIES OUT TOWARD RICEIVER, ITS LONG AXIS TILTED SLIGHTLY UPWARD. A SLOW SPIN IS BEST. HALF OF SALL IS PAINTED WHITE TO SHOW ITS SPIN.

Captain Mel Hein demonstrates center pass

Ball is gripped, for a spiral center pass, by the right hand placed well under the front and right side of ball, and by the left hand placed farther back on the opposite side. In this way the ball will be rotated smoothly from right to left when it is snapped.

The ball is snapped with the right hand spinning it and left hand carefully giving it direction. Actually the pass from center is nothing but an underhand forward pass. I shally the distance the ball is passed by the center varies with each type of play.

Whan the ball is in flight to a backfield man, the center must get set to throw a block on a defensive lineman. Note how the widespread feet give Mel Hein perfect balance. By watching his opponents' feet he can sometimes foresee their action.

Back Eddie Miller demonstrates how to punt

Fool calches half full on the right side of the instep. A half-second before, the ball was dropped straight down by simply removing hand from underneath, making sure the fingers did not twist the ball. The punt is the most important single play in football.

With a full pendulum swing the leg follows through in the direction of the kick. Spiral was obtained by originally pointing the ball slightly to left of line of flight before dropping. As leg swings, the kine is slightly bent, straightens out at contact with ball.

Olf zooms the ball toward the opponents' end sone. Some players actually leave the ground on their follow-through. Others plant their left heel solidly on the ground. A kick out of bounds inside the 20-yd. line, keeps opponents deep in own territory.

MAP OF BATTLE IS BASED ON MAP NO. 10181 OF FRENCH ADM RALT

Published below is the first detailed eyewitness account of the Battle of Mers-el-Kebir (in Oran Bay, Algeria) when a British equadron shelled the main forces of the French Fleet on July 5. The writer, agnal officer on the bridge of the battleship Bretagns, is now assistant French naval attaché in Tokyo.—ED.

The Battle of Mers-el-Kebu

Washington, D. C.

I was the officer on duty aboard the French battleship Bretague on July 3 when, at 7 a. m., I saw the British destroyer Forhound arriving in the roads. On board the French ships, moored side by side in the harbor of Mers-el-Kebir, daily routine was being resumed. The Farhound stopped beyond the anti-submarine nets and a French launch carrying an officer met her to establish contact. At 9:30 a m the British Fleet arrived in the roads and assembled in front of Mers-el-Kebar. It included the battle cruser Hond, battleships Resolution and Valrant, the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, three cruisers and many destroyers.

The British battleships soon signaled a message summoning us either to follow the British Fleet, senttle or face destruction. These terms were inadmusible. Everyone approved Vice Admiral Marcel Brano Gensoul's decision to light the fires and clear the decks for action.

At 11 a. m. five British planes dropped mines across the passage left open in the submarine nets (see map). A British plane circled overhead, looking for any movements from our gun turrets and radioing the information to the British ships.

The British ultimatum was due to expire at 2 p. m. Still confident that nothing would happen, our men, standing at their fighting stations, were quietly reading magazines, chatting together or exchanging wisecracks. But nothing happened at 2 p. m. except for a message from the Hood notifying us that the expiration of the ultimatum had been postponed until 5.30 p. m.

At 3 p. m. Captain (S. Holland, former British naval attaché at Paris, went on board the French flagship Dunkerque. His visit to Admiral Gensoul lasted until 4:30 p. m. 13 looked very pale when we saw had pass as he returned to the Britis Fleet

The British Inunch which our e him away had hardly disappeare when the first British shells hit the pic a short distance from us. The Britis Fleet, halden behind Cape Merset Kebir, was firing from behind a smooth screen at a range of about seven mile The Dunkerons and Processes were th only French ships able to return the British fire, but they could not do thi very effectively because of the Britis smoke screen. French coastal by teries however, compelled the British to most farther out to sea, and sank a destroye

Orders were then given to the per sonnel in the spotting crow's-nest t evacuate, but the ladder descending down deck was already red bot an several men who attempted to comdown crashed to the deck as the burn ropes could not sustain the stress.

Hopes of running the Bretagn ashore were now forlorn and the orac to evacuate was given by the captain Men all over the Bretagne were leav n their fighting stations and were led t the only safe place from where the could jump into the water the fore-par-

My impression was that i a fall when skung, my favorite sport I sank down, down, down about 40 ft under the water but was able to su tain the pressure of the water and keemy breath. This was my gloomies moment. I had to swim upward by it was so dark down there that I coul not make out where the surface was My first attempt to reach the surface

A BRICK STRUCTURE usually is a safer fire risk than one of wood, and fire insurance rates vary accordingly, since rates are determined by the degree of hazard involved. But here was a brick building with a small frame addition in the rear. Because the two buildings were communicating, the otherwise greater safety of the brick building was impaired by the greater fire hazard present in the frame building.

The White Fireman* pointed out to the owner the wisdom of moving the frame structure. The suggestion was appreciated, especially when the White Fireman added that the move would entitle the brick building to a considerably lower fire insurance rate. So, this property-owner profited in money and in greater safety by this extra North America service to policyholders.

did not succeed, but I tried again in a different direction and felt the pressure in my ears gradually decrease, This was the right direction and I swam hard for I needed air hadly now. By the time I reached the surface the Bretagne had already almost disappeared. Only a small part of her bull was still above water. All around emerged the heads of what looked like colored people swimming in all directions. There were about 50 of them. They were white men but a layer of fuel oil, about 2 m. thick, covered the water around the Bretagne and blackened all of us. A shell had evidently bit the Bretagne's oil tanks as she was turning turtle and flames ran here and there on the oil-sonked water. Fortunstely the fuel oil was cold and did not eatch fire but it may have proved fatal to some exhausted men who probably choked on the oil and died.

As I was swimming about, I saw our Streebourg speeding full steam ahead past the pier and firing with all her guns. The guard was presenting arms and the band played on her stern. Everyone left alive shouted. Our light cruisers had left the buy and only the damaged warships remained. The aircraft carrier Commandant Tests, anchored about 200 yd. from the spot where the Bretague sank, was safe and did not seem to have been bit by a single shell or even a splinter.

For about half an hour we remained in the water, trying to swim to the shore or at least to get out of the oil. Launches picked up everyone they could. Of the 45 officers on the Bretogne, seven were left alive. Of our 1,400 men, 1,100 were killed.

Of the men rescued, each had had a miraculous escape. One had been ejected through a portholo by the force of air escaping as the ship capsaged. Another had slipped from portaide to starboard under the hull and had emerged on the other aide of the ship.

During the battle that part of the French Fleet that had not been sunk took to the high seas with all guns firing. The Fleet then separated to head for Toulon, France and Bizerte, French Tumsia. They reached these ports riddled with holes but without loss, signaling that they had shot down two British planes from the Ark Royal.

The only vessels remaining at Mersel-Kebir were: the battleships Dunkerque and Procence (beached), the destroyer Magador (beached) and the Bretagne, resting under water in her last sleep.

THE MENDERPOLIS-HOREYWELL CHRONOTHERM

"I don't know just when my hearing began to fail", writen Mr. Carl A. Byrne, retired stemp-litter, Tacoma, Wash. "... not until I completely failed to hear my faithful old watch would I admit my hearing wash I as good as ever. But a hearing and never entered my mand... I thought I was getting by ... never occurred to mail was forming myself..."

THE MAN WHO NEVER SAYS "GOOD-BYE"

AST year, more than half of the hearing aids bought in America were Sonotones.

And one of the biggest reasons for that overwhelming choice was a man who never says "good-bye"!

Ten years ago, when you bought a hearing aid, the chances were that you'd never hear from the salesman again . . . at any rate, not 'til he thought it was time to sell you another instrument.

But to-day, when a Sonotone Consultant comes into a hard of hearing person's life, he comes in with a new idea of service to the Sonotone wearer, a persistency and permanency of service that is as revolutionary (and welcome) in the hearing aid industry as Hugo Lieber's bone conduction oscillator was.

For the Sonotone Consultant, it must be remembered, is a technical specialist and not just a salesman. He sells, of course . . . but he sells hearing and not just a hearing aid.

And when he sits a hard of hearing man down before the Audiometer in his office, measures his hearing, analyzes his hearing deficiencies, and then from the more than 1000 possible Sonotone adjustments, fits him with just the audicle he needs . . . why, in his eyes, that's just the beginning. For his is a job of never-ending service. He never says "good-bye". And just as Mr. Byrne writes in this fascinating letter (one of thousands in Sonotone's files) he'll be back to make sure that every Sonotone wearer gets the most hearing that science can possibly give him.

In hundreds of communities, the Sonotone Consultant, thanks to his rigorous training and cumulative experience in handling not only technical but psychological and adjustment problems associated with deafness, has achieved a well-deserved professional standing. And there are many people who will insist that in developing this nation-wide staff of Consultants, Sonotone has made as revolutionary a contribution to better hearing as any that ever emerged from the great Sonotone research laboratories.

"As time went on my bearing became worse Friends passed me by on the street. Knowing I was very hard of hearing they amply antibel and nodded but never spake, but I still believed that I was getting by."

"... tny family protested I turned our radio on too high, disturbing the whole peubliochend. These protests rised me Of course I turned the radio on bond enough to hear it but I thought the protests were exaggerated."

". . . this went on for 2 years. One day, P. A. Brucckner, from my Local I man, and, 'Carl, the head and devoted to get you an ear-phone. I mid, 'Obey won't help me. He said, 'you'll never know 'til you try.' "

". . . in the Sountine office Miss Pearl Bailey showed as a Sountine . . . and she was wearing one the Leculda t see at . . Look my name and address to have the Soundian Consultant cast at my home."

"That same evening, the Sonotone Comultant called. From one grap he take Audioscope. From another, a second audioscope. As he connected it, he capable the 'why' and the 'wherefore' of the

"... but oh, the surprise Senotone had for met. As he adjusted the Senotone the world opened up ... I could hear the radio, voices, automobiles. For the first time I realised how hard of hearing I actually was."

"... Mr. Ruff did not accept this first filting, as good as it was, as final, He wanted the best Sonotone adjustment for me... and when he shut off that Sonotone it was like shutting off the world."

"... the Consultant came again that evening with Fred Brucckner. This time the demonstration was even more complete. I felt satisfied Sonotone was the best for my needs. It was delivered for me that evening."

"I put my Superiore on next morning . . , bearing a hammering none to the kitchen, I went in . . . and burst into laughter. The 'tappang' was my daughter Mary walking . . . the first time I over heard her (notsteps,"

", ... out in the yard I dutantly hear if whistles of steamships on the hay man tails away from where I live. And as I a on the porch, I got to the king of m, its introduction to this blenged be return.

".. as I look back to the time before I got Sonotone, I realize I wasn't getting by at all. I merely existed. But Sonotone has brought me back into the living, bearing world. Friends no longer pass me by "

Detailed Information on Sonotone may be had quickly by looking under the name "SONOTONE" in your local telephone directors (there are offices in 120 cities a the country)—or by writing to Sonotone (orporation, Hussford N. Y

"As I sit here, pegging away at my old typewriter, it may sound superfluous to you who read this when I say that the interest of Mr. R. A. Huff, your Tacoma Consultant, does not reast with the sale of a Souotone. Although Mr. Huff is a very busy man, he has called to see me many times. He is as much interested in my progress today as he was the first time a Sanotone was demonstrated to me."

At Elessiste, N. Y., Sonotone carries on the most extensive scientific researce that has ever been done on hearing aids. One of the brilliant triumphs these great laboratories is the new vacuum tube instrument in which Son tone proneered the application of the principle of radio tomoking hearing case.

PRO-WILLKIE VIRGINIANS OBSERVE "NO-THIRD-TERM DAY" OCT. 23 BY DEMONSTRATING IN HISTORIC BULL BUN THAT IT IS POSSIBLE TO CHANGE HORSES IN MIDSTREAM

AMERICANS HIT NEW HIGH IN POLITICAL PEP AS PRESIDENTIAL RACE NEARS FINISH

Lieven days before the election, the New York News produced a statistical marvel. Of 25,587 straw votes tabulated to date in its Presidential poll of crucial New York State, 12,796 were for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 12,791 were for Wendell Willkie, Thus, for that day, Canadidate Roosevelt emerged the leader by 50 0098% of the total vote to 49,9902% for Candidate Willkie.

Throughout the land last week there spread a conviction that the Presidential campaign of 1940, now thundering down the home stretch, had become a real horse race. The result might swing on the margin of a few hundred thousand votes scattered in strategic States, "Beyond question," reported Columnist Raymond Clapper, after a tour through half a dozen Midwest States, "this is the hardest-fought campaign since 1916 and the first since then in which the outcome has not been clearly accepted by those on the losing side who knew the situation."

As a result, the U. S. bubbled and boiled last week with its hottest political activity in 24 years. Behind the barrage of professional speakers and organizers, tens of thousands of amateurs charged into the field with the enthusiasm born of belief that this time, when every vote counted, they could really do some good. No stunt that might dramatize an issue or win a wavering vote was too outlandish to be tried—not even a physical demonstration in historic Bull Run that horses can successfully be changed in midstream (above).

Political strategists sprouted in every parlor, burgeoning with schemes to snare the Negro vote, the Polish vote, the Labor vote, the cat-owner vote. Some, in the apparent conviction that they alone held the magic words that would open the gate of victory, bought full page advertisements in the newspapers to add to the surfeit of political argument already hurdening the press. Others took to the radio or souphox, knocked doors, put on furny costumes, plastered the landscape with signs, tossed balloons, passed buttons and pamphlets.

To the vigilant patriot all this excitement and activity was a cheering sign, for it meant that the people were thinking bard about this eracial election. Beneath all the ferment, which LIFE reviews in the following pages, lay a troubled certainty valso unfelt since 1916—that Americans are approaching a fateful decision. What the result of either choice would be, no man could say. But few of the 50,000,-000 voters could doubt that their lives and their children's would be shaped at the polls on Nov. 5.

REPUBLICANS HURL ALL RESOURCES INTO LAST BIG PUSH FOR VICTORY

Because they are the challengers, Republicans have incontestably outshone Democrats in the scope and variety of their campaign performance. Because their candidate is an unconventional one and the issues closely drawn, their 1940 efforts have been distinguished by more energy, color and cogency than any other G. O. P. drive in the memory of this generation. Last week, as the campaign went into its final hours, Wendell Willkie's supreme endeavor was backed by all the oratorical, journalistic and theatrical resources of a thousand supporting organizations from coast to coast.

Perhaps it was because of the Hatch Act which limits expenditures of national political organizations. Perhaps it was because Wilkie had appealed to a more comprehensive cross-section of the U.S. electorate than any former G.O.P. candidate. But political veterans agreed they had never known such a multitude of clubs, committees and leagues as were busy last week. Rivaling New Deal agencies in alphabetical confusion, they included: Women Workers for Wilkie, Democrats for Wilkie, Independents for Wilkie, Wilkiettes, Women Volunteers for Wilkie, Committee of Unemployed Friends for Wilkie, American-Chinese for Wilkie Club, Wilkie Wings for America, Businessmen's Committee for Honest Elections, Harvard Wilkie Club, Citizen's Election Committee, and Non-Partisan Women-Drawn-Together-by-Fear-of-Daugers-of-a-Third-Term

Together these organizations and hundreds of others filled the air with Republican rhetoric, plastered the nation with bill-boards (see p. 36), covered coat lapels with a blinding galaxy of buttons. Wilkie fliers specked the skies. Wilkie bingo parties, garden parties and motorcades enlivened thousands of cities and towns. Puppet shows dramatized the evils of the New Deal. While big city crowds cheered Wilkie's personal appearances, his running mate Charles L. McNary wandered through rural districts, appealing to his friends, the farmers, and shunning Chambers of Commerce which, he confessed, made him uncomfortable. To their voices were added those of innumerable Republicans, Independents and Democrats-for Wilkie. As election day approached, there were few who would not say that the Republican case had been carried—and carried vigorously—to the utmost corners of the land.

WORRIED DEMOCRATS START TARDY SPRINT DOWN THE HOME STRETCH

Intil last week the Democratic show had about as much pep as an old stock company vehicle with one star performer who disliked his role. In most States managers felt confident that on election day, Star Roosevelt would pack them in as usual. But Mr. Roosevelt was faced with a delemma: if he went on the road, people would charge him with neglecting his duties as chief executive in time of crisis; and if he stayed in Washington, his opponent would tear him to pieces. So Star Roosevelt worked out a kind of morality play, involving defense inspection tours and non-political speeches. He gave most of the political lines to his understudy, Henry A. Wallace.

Then something happened. Public opinion polls showed a sudden startling shift to Wendell Wilkie. Five Midwestern States slid out from under Democratic feet. Roosevelt's popular majority went into a decline. It was obviously the time to get going. From all parts of the Midwest and Far West, anxious leaders appealed to national headquarters for action. "Send us speakers and speakers," pleaded Lyun Broderick, Kansas campaign manager. "We can use six or eight full time. What's the matter with you guys up there? You're not licked yet, are you?"

Thus challenged, the sluggish Democratic giant began to stir. From New York it was announced that 30,000 Roosevelt Minute Men were available for radio programs, forms and meetings. An additional 1,000, calling themselves the Roosevelt Hundred-Hour Men, volunteered to spend 100 of the campaign's last 192 hours urging voters to the polls. Marshall Field and Herbert Bayard Swope announced the formation of the Business Men's League for Roosevelt. A Committee of Regular Republicans for the Re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt took full-page newspaper space, proclaiming: "Sorry, Mr. Willkie . . . This is where we get off the fence!" Henry Wallace and Governor Lehman hammered away at the thesis that Willkie is Hitler's choice for the Presidency, Mayor LaGuardia went into action. (right).

The climax came the evening of Oct. 23. Stung by Republican "falsifications," President Roosevelt went to Philadelphia and delivered the first of five avowedly political addresses. In fine oratorical form, he told a cheering throng of 16,000. "I will not pretend that I find this an impleasant duty. I am an old campaigner and I love a good fight."

ON THE NEWSFRONTS OF THE WORLD

Hitler tries to talk France and Spain into a "United Europe" before U.S. elections

The British Intelligence Service found out something last week before it happened. On the basis of this information Prime Minister Churchill made a moving radio plea to all Frenchmen everywhere to hold freedom in their hearts: "Think of it always. Speak of it never." The next day Adolf Hitler, as the British agents had predicted, met France's Vice Premier Laval in Occupied France with offers of peace at a price. Twenty-four hours later his special train took him on to the Spanish border where, with an imposing entourage of generals and officials, he met Spain's Dictator Generalissimo Franco. Next day he was back in Occupied France, courteously receiving now both Laval and his nominal boss, Premier Marshal Pétain.

Exactly what Hitler had said at these three drumfire meetings was not announced. But the official Nazi Foreign Office paper gave a clue in speaking of "the community which today is Europe . . . against which the enemy is waging war only from the outside." It called mutilated France and exhausted Spain "the two great nations of Western Europe." The press of both nations spoke of the flattering politeness with which Hitler had received their chiefs Hitler was trying, less than two weeks before the crucial American elections, to present the U.S. and Britain with the accomplished fact of a "united Europe" like Napoleon's in 1805, that does not want to be saved from the Nazis by the U. S. or Britain. For this favor to Europe, Hitler naturally asked some favors in return. Spain would be expected to co-operate actively with the German Army divisions in civilian clothes now trickling through Spain to Gibraltar. The capture of Gibraltar would break Britain's grip on the Western Mediterranean. More important for the U.S., it would open the road down the west coast of Africa to the Germans, who would like to have Dakar, the nearest possible jumping-off place for a plane trip to the Western Hemisphere. It would also end the British blockade of North Africa's huge grain reserve, enough to feed most of Europe this winter. France would then be allowed some of its own Algerian grain, in return for which it would give Germany "co-operation" in its North African and Syrian properties for an attack on the Sucz Canal or the Iraq oil fields. France might even throw in the remnants of its Fleet to heat the British. There was many a sorehead among the French leaders who still resented Britain's attack on the French Fleet more than Germany's conquest of France.

Hitler's basic idea was that the multilingual peoples of the continent of Europe should unite against the English-speaking world. In cold and misty weather Pétain and Franco went home to think it over. The Spanish press began to assert that many Spaniards show the Teutonic features of their "Visigoth origins." But the Paris radio, putting on a comic opera, screamed the last lines of the finale which go: "After the day of storm comes the summer sun. It is love that will give us back our liberty." Next day it was suppressed.

HITLER MEETS LAVAL

Blitzkrieg Manners, As London's channey pots put up their own smoke screen, Nazi bombers went on to bomb the sprawling industrial Midlands. British bombers under able and ruthless Air Chief of Staff Portal were giving Germany back some of its own. The Berlin press promptly acreamed: "For this organized terrorism . . . we will exact a thousandfold revenge." This did not deceive even the dazed German public, to whom the Government has long been boasting of its all-out masterpieces of terrorism over London.

The R. A. F. was personally irritated by the story of one Ober-Leutnant Baron von Werra, 26, who claimed to have shot down five British fighters singlehanded, chased four others to their landing field, which he boldly machine-gunned, thus getting from his credulous superior the Iron Cross, First Class. This was pure fantasy for which the British awarded him the nickname of Baron Munchausen. To their delight they shot him down last week. He escaped once and was caught again.

Another German flier, while his wounds were being dressed, obscenely cursed his doctors and nurses. After he had been given a blood transfusion and popped into bed, his nurse clucked: "Now, my lad. you have two pints of good Jewish blood in you. We hope it will improve your manners."

EMMON8

Air Organizing, There were significant signs that the U. S. is beginning to integrate its aviation forces. The Army announced that in increasing the number of its planes from 3,200 to 12,800 and personnel from 45,000 to 163,000 men, it would also increase its "wings" (a wing is comparable to an Army regiment) from four to 17. The Army Air Corps would be subdivided into four districts-northeast, southeast, northwest, southwest-a method modeled after the efficient German Luftkommandos or air districts. To command these districts, four Air Corps officers were boosted to the rank of major general and the head of the Arr Force G. H. Q., forthright Major General Delos C. Emmons, was made a lieutenant general, first Air Corps man to receive this high rank. The new beutenant general thus is equal in rank to commander generals of the four field armies.

In Detroit, meanwhile, Defense Commissioner knudsen told auto makers that they would soon be asked to manufacture wing and fuscinge parts for airplanes. This means: 1) that some of the strain of making complete airplanes will be taken off overworked aircraft manufacturers; 2) that production will be speeded up; 3) that vital production will be decentralized. It also means that the long-awaited standardization of models, so necessary for mass production, is imminent.

British on Willkie. After months of presenting Wendell Willkie to their readers as a wild mustang from the woolly West, the London press significantly began painting Willkie in more flattering colors to prepare Britain for a possible Roosevelt defeat.

Down the Danube. The "glorious new day" in Europe swept down the Balkans and inspired the Bucharest Tageblatt to trumpet: "Rumania is the second European state to join the Axis and thus after Germany is the second most important Danubian state, the leader of Southeast Europe." Flushed with Axis fervor, the Rumanian Government induced Spain to place Ex-King Carol and his loyal mistress, Magda Lupescu, under arrest in Seville. Fearful that Spain will send them back to Bucharest to face trial, Carol was said to be appealing for President Roosevelt's help.

One dark cloud was the resentment of Soviet Russia at being excluded from the Danubian Conference called by Germany for this week at Vienna. Given a belated invitation, it proposed to dredge the mouth of the Danube taken from Rumania, to turn it into a first-class port. Germany now dominates the other mouths of the Danube. Such concern over the Danube suggests how seriously Russia would object to German occupation of a far more important waterway, the Dardanelles, now belonging to Turkey. One guess was that Germany might "buy" the Dardanelles by "giving" Russia eastern Turkey, Iran and Afghanistan. A better guess was that Germany would leave the Dardanelles alone, strike at Africa from Sicily or possibly the Greek islands. What the cornered Yugoslavs think of things was suggested by the fact that Queen Mother Marie and her two young heirs to the throne are in England.

Of the campaign issues, the one which best lends itself to dramatization is the Third Term. In Philadelphia, the Willkie Clubs began a No-Third-Term-Day demonstration by tolling a bell 164 times, once for each year of America's political liberty. Wigged and pantalooned, "George Washington," "Thomas Jefferson" and "Andrew Jackson" filed onto the platform and recited their historic rejections of a Third Term as President. Then, with a nasal "My fr-1-e-n-d s!" City Councilman L. Wallace Egan. the master of ceremonies, stepped to the microphone (see opposite page) and introduced "the only indispensable man in this country." Out stalked Uncle Sam to help Mr. Egan lead the crowd in a Roman gesture of Third Term rejection.

More than 260 speeches since Sept. 14 were under the Willkie belt when on Oct. 23 (above) he told the Herald Tribune Forum in New York that "Once we have submitted to the domination of our economic life by an all-powerful central government, individual liberty is gone."

25,000 people jammed Chicago Stadium Oct. 22 to hear Willkie recite record of broken Roosevelt promises and charge that if the President's peace promise is no better than these "our boys are already almost on the transports." Below. Indiana gives him a new kind of platform.

THE CHOICE

WILLKIE

These are the great issues of the Presidential compaign as they have emerged from the arguments of the condidates and their supporters. Digested from hundreds of campaign speeches and articles, they are listed below

In the form of "I believe" affirmations Probably few voters, when they go to the palls next Tuesday, will be prepared to make all of the affirmations in either list. Each must decide which one or ones weigh most heavily believe, with Mr. Willkie, that human life has a purpose, that that purpose is the progress of mankind through the mental and spiritual growth of individual men, that individual men can grow only through the privileges and responsibilities of freedom, and hence that the first duty and dedication of Americans now and forever is to preserve their freedom.

I believe, with Mr. Willkie, that individual freedom and economic freedom are inseparable, that Americans can remain free only if they preserve their traditional system of free economic enterprise.

I believe, with Mr. Willkie, that that system can be preserved only if it is made increasingly more efficient and productive.

I believe, with Mr. Willkie, that it can be made so.

I believe that Mr. Willkie, as a businessman who understands that system from first-hand experience, who believes in it wholeheartedly and wholeheartedly wants it to succeed, is better fitted to lead the nation in making it efficient and productive than is Mr. Roosevelt.

I believe that, whatever the intentions of the New Dealers, the trend of the New Deal is toward complete government control of the nation's economic life

I believe that the Third Term bid, coming on top of the vast increase in Federal debt and the establishment of millions of citizens' direct dependence on the Federal Government, is the culmination of the New Deal trend toward state socialism. I believe that it may result in the consolidation of national one-man one-party supremacy through the exact process of the corrupt city machine which are supporting it: the exchange of votes for government jobs, benefits and favors dispensed directly to individual voters. I believe that if successful it may destroy the American system of two-party government.

I believe that Mr. Willkie will defend America with deeds rather than words. I believe that the main problem of American defense is speedy, abundant production of arms and that Mr. Willkie can stimulate and organize that product on more efficiently than Mr. Roosevelt.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt, because of his impulsiveness, is more likely to lead America into war before it is ready and willing to go than is Mr. Walkie.

I believe that the basic New Deal social and business reforms should be preserved, and that Mr. Willkie means to preserve them, can preserve them and will preserve them.

I believe that Mr. Willkie can and will work harder and more effectively than Mr. Roosevelt to achieve national unity by bringing all classes and occupations together in the conviction that the good of one is the good of all.

I believe that Mr. Wilkie has the great qualities of courage and sincerity.

BEFORE US

ROOSEVELT

In his own mind and heart and conscience.

LIFE hopes that these check-tists will aid its reader-voters in their decisions. It also hopes that an Nav. 5 those whose condidate has lost may take some comfort and reassurance in pandering the affirmations of the winning side and reflecting that, however benighted they may still seem, the fact that they are held by a majority of Americans may mean that there is something in them after all.

believe that Mr. Roosevelt is regarded as a symbol and champion of democracy throughout the world and that his defeat would severely discourage the democratic peoples of the world and encourage the fascists.

I believe that for the critical months and years ahead America should not put at the head of the U.S. Government a man totally inexperienced in government. I believe that the need for Mr. Roosevelt's experience in the present crisis outweight objections to the Third Term.

I believe that the need for continuity as well as experience in office requires Mr. Roosevelt's re-election. I believe that a change of Presidents would mevitably to settle the Government at least between Nov. 5 and Jan. 20 and probably for some time thereafter, and that Hitler or Japan might choose to strike during that unsettled period.

I believe that war may be inescapable in the near future and that Mr. Roosevelt, because of his experience and capacity for inspiring leadership would be a more effective wartime leader than Mr. Willkie.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt has the confidence and support of the laboring masses of the American people as Mr. Willkie has not. I believe that such confidence and support would be essential to a wartime President.

I believe that the world is now in a period of historic transition and that Mr. Roosevelt, because of his proven flexibility and, as Dorothy Thompson observed, his "understanding of conflicting social forces," is better equipped than Mr. Willkie to bring America through this time of transition without loss of essential values.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt, as a great humanitarian with a gift for constructive achievement, has been the greatest reform President in American history. I believe that he is an instinctive democrat who has neither the temperament nor the wish to become a dictator.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt would never compromise with the dictators abroad and that Mr. Willkie might.

I believe that the majority of America's leading businessmen and financiers are unsympathetic with the needs of the masses of the people. I believe that Mr. Roosevelt is the people's defender against them. I believe that, under their pressure, Mr. Willkie might be unable to preserve the reforms which Mr. Roosevelt has achieved.

Taking the stump at last only 13 days before the elections, Candulate Roosevelt combined some defense inspection with campaigning even though trip was paid for by the Democratic Committee. Above: he tells slippard workers at Camden, N. J. to "keep up the speed."

AMATEURS AND PROFESSIONALS FLOCK TO THE HUSTINGS IN LAST BITTER STAGES

Kathisen Nerris, highly successful U.S. novelist (Saturday's Children, Beauty and the Beast, The Foolish Virgin, Wife For Sale, Beauty's Daughter) speaks for Wilkie in New Jersey. Of all the pro-Wilkie ladies, she is one of the most indefatigable. A witty and convincing ad his speaker, she appeals especially to mothers on the Keep-Out-Of-War issue.

Mary Pickford records 300 words for Wendell Wilkie on a phonograph record at a "Win With Wilkie" Garden Party in Hollywood. She also spoke with deep sincerity to the audience of rich California Republicans. Her best (though not entirely original) crack. "They say we must not change horses in midstream—but how did we get in midstream?"

Cordell Hall, the most respected member of the Roose-velt Cabinet, defended the Administration's foreign policy, flung back the warmongering charge of John L. Lewis. "If we ignored the aggressor nations," he said, "we might find ourselves compelled to fight on our own soil, under our own skies, in defense of our independence and our very lives,"

Gloria Swanson, retired star of the silent movies, is for William. She objects to the overhearing charm of Roosevelt, his desire for a Third Term. She is an expert on charm, having been married to Wallace Beery, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray and Michael Farmer. She is convinced that Willkie will do a better job at national defense.

Daniel J. Tobia, president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters Brotherhood, a strong Roosevelt man, charges that John L. Lewis in awitching to Willkie "is liming up with the men who tried to cruesfy him and me—Mr. Weir and Mr. Girdler "He says Lewis got mad because Roosevelt turned down requests which were "impossible and possibly illegal to grant."

Clare 800ths, author of Europe in the Spring, says: "The Democratic Party . . . is the Party of Fear. What unites us is that we are the Party of Courage. . I agree that President Roosevelt was a great man in the emergency of 1982. Then, also, Mr. Roosevelt himself discovered he was a great man in emergencies. When they did not exist he created more,"

New Deal to a rotten egg, "yellow and it stinks. It's got a smooth, slick shell outside and it's all foulness within Political platforms are like platforms of railroad trains you get on by them but you don't ride through on them ... I'd rather risk despotism from without than from within."

Helen Gahagan, actress-wife of Actor Melvyn Douglas, pictures "an army of nearly 48,000,000 women who have benefited directly under the New Deal. I do not know whether these women call themselves Democrats or Republicans. I only know that their government under Roosevelt has reached out to lighten their burdens and brighten their lives,"

Robert Honghwont Jackson, Roosevelt's Attorney General, tells a Jamestown, N. Y. crowd that Wilkie would leave the government defenseless against the profiteer. "While preaching sacrifice to the masses of the people, he has defended defense profits of his big-business friends. He has bitterly opposed any conscription of wealth or of plants."

OF THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN AND BOTH SIDES BEGIN TO SLUG IN EARNEST

Alfred E. Smith, defeated Democratic candidate for President in 1928 who voted for Landon in 1936, campaigns vigorously for Wilkie on the Dictatorship and Class Hatred issues. Of Wilkie he says: "When he has been in hostile territory they were glad to listen to him and glad to look at him." He predicts that Wilkie will carry New York State.

Borethy Thompson, columnist, longtume Roosevelt critic, announces she will vote for Roosevelt. She considers Foreign Policy, not the Third Term, the true issue of 1940. Roosevelt, she says, has the essential asset: "the confidence of the workers that he will not use conscription and defense to destroy their freedom," plus what it takes to heat Hitler.

Frances ("Ma") Perkins, Roosevelt's Secretary of Labor, tells a Brooklyn women's rally most important fact of the next four years, no matter who is President of the U. S. "Month by month, employment on defense contracts is rising." She claims for the New Deal credit for rusing wages of 700,000 of the lowest paid workers to 30¢ an hour

Martha Taft, whose husband Wilkie heat for the nomination, speaks ably for Wilkie: "We have the opportunity to change to a man who knows the difference between a plane on order and a plane in the air, and who knows that ... we must have the co-operation of industry, of labor, of farmer and of the taxpayer. . . . Wilkie believes in our system."

John Cudahy, Roosevelt's Ambassador to Belgium, tells audience at Menden, Conn.: "Any qualified President these days... must know the methods of chancelleries, the history and traditions of nations. It is a technique in itself, a technique one does not learn in the management of an American utility corporation." He wants Franklin D. Roosevelt.

C. Wayland ("Curley") Brooks, Republican candelate for U. S. Senator from Illinois, says: "When business seeks to completely control the government, or the government seeks to dictate all the rules of business, free government and free enterprise will both die. When you lose a minority voice in a country, liberty dies," He is an Isolationist

Frank O. Lowden, 79, a voice from the Republican past, exhorts the U. S. to meet its "severest test" by electing Wilkie. "If it should fail, this may be the last free election in our great republic," He demands a Constitutional amendment prohibiting a third term for President of U. S., compares the Roosevelt "draft" to a "Communist Convention."

Gifford Pinchet, ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, who was for Theodore Roosevelt for a Third Term in 1912, is also for Franklin D. Roosevelt for a Third Term in 1940. Says her "I am a Republican but I am an American first. The question before us is not who is indispensable but which is better fitted by knowledge and training." His answer is Roosevelt.

Mrs. Deborah Delano, 98, President Roosevelt's third cousin who belted the Republican Party to vote for him in 1932, bolts back. Says she. "Even if he is as smart as they say, no man is smart enough to run for three terms. Wilkie is just as smart. Franklin does not need the money he makes as President, and now it is time to give a poor man the job."

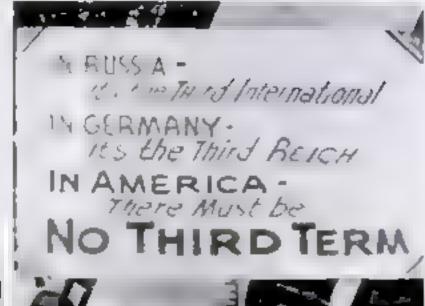

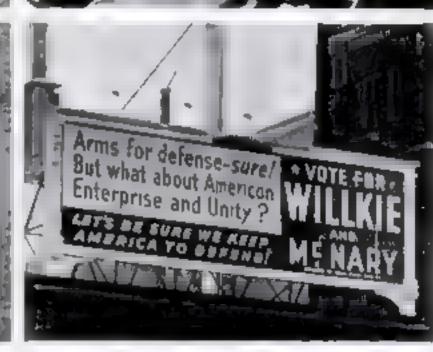

CAMPAIGN POSTERS OF BOTH PARTIES PLASTER U. S. WALLS

The U.S. was plastered with political posters from the tip of Maine to the toe of California Barns, billboards, warehouses, trees and walls trumpeted the claims of the rival Parties. In Pittsburgh a Willkie warning against "Dictatorship" rested ominously above a movie billboard advertising The Great Dic-

Republican poster linking Roosevelt with persecution of the Church Most graphic of the lot showed Uncle Sam turning thumbs down on the Third Term. Many a poster suffered from the great American urge to draw in istaches on smooth upper lips and chins.

THE MAN IN THE PICTURE has nothing on us.

Fifteen months ago, when we reduced the price of Paul Jones Whiskey, we expected a modest increase in sales. And instead, we saw this whiskey leap fire fold in popularity!

Certainly spectacular proof that people want and like a dry whiskey! A whiskey without a single trace of sweetness!

Of course. Paul Jones has been famous for its dryness for years. But for years, this and other great qualities made it expensive. Connoisseurs turned to it, for they knew the difference dryness makes in whiskey drinks—as it does in champagne and sherry. But there were others who also prized dryness—who wanted Paul Jones but couldn't afford it.

So, without changing a single one of Paul Jones' expensive qualities, we deliberately reduced the price. We made Paul Jones a popular-priced whiskey!

And how popular it has become! Today, it's one of the fastest-selling whiskies in America!

If you haven't treated your palate to Paul Jones, give it a try today! Its popular price will give your purse a break. And man—what zest and tang you'll find in its grand dry flavor!

FOUR DARING YOUNG MEN DO ACROBATIC MIRACLES The acrobats above, hurtling through air like a gigantic caterpillar, are the world's greatest Risley artists. Risley is a difficult kind of aerial tumbling originated in the 18th Century by Richard Risley, the first man ever to juggle a boy on his feet and flip him into a backward somersault.

To this astonishing skill the four Whitson brothers have added new wrinkles. Nightly in the Rainbow Room atop New York's Radio City they somersault backward, forward, in ones, twos and threes, to split-second swing-music timing. The Rainbow Room is the mecca of all night-club and vaudeville performers, the "big time" beyond which there is no bigger.

The Whitson brothers, Lester, Clyde, Arthur and Buddy, are actually three brothers and a cousin. Born in California, they learned acrobatics in an orphanage, became experts in a circus. For LIFE's Photographer Gjon Mili they moved equipment to his studio where, against black flats, they performed their hazardous leaps and loops while he photographed them with a Deardorff camera at 1/30,000 of a second.

MACHINES ATTACK THE SOLID FLESH

Factory methods for reducing

These pictures were not taken in the torture chamber of a medieval dungeon. They were taken in one of the 200 MacLevy "slenderizing salons" in the F. S. Here massive machines of steel, heavy coll springs and wooden rollers now replace masseuse's hands in rubbing the fat from lazy female bodies.

To demonstrate these reducing machines LIFE picked pretty Model Pat Ogden, who is placidly letting herself be electrically rolled in the Slendro Massager at left. With many other New York models. Pat goes to a salon occasionally to keep her figure trim

Mong with Pat, LIFE sent its fattest researcher to play guinea pig for fat LIFE readers. She found the machines pleasant and generally painless. The Slendro Massager made her feel "like a piece of dough being rolled." but like a biscuit she felt no pain. "This is like a silent movie where you see yourself being spanked and await with dread the stinging pain which never arrives," she reported.

Of the other machines she said. "The Roaler Massager (below) makes you think that at last you're going to find out what it's like to ride a horse. Instead the friction on your seat soon makes you think you've ridden through a whole rodeo. The Back Ring Roller (top of next page) makes you conscious of looking like a Salem witch in the stocks."

The other machines that roll bulging stomachs, thighs, culves and ankles are also painless enough to allow reading, knitting, lunching or dozing. They that is LIFE's reporter feel "like a slowly deflating balloon."

Her final comment: "As you look around the torture room and see the fat ladies standing in rows, you re amazed at their complacent contentment. They are all getting than without an effort. They all still look as if they were munching chocolates."

IN THE SLENDRO MASSAGER UP-AND DOWN ROLLERS ELECTRICALLY RUB AWAY THE STOMACH, HIPS AND THIGHS

Rusier Massager is an all-purpose machine for use on any overweight part. Here the machine works on thigh.

Abdomes massage is achieved thus. Roaler Massager is popular because women can operate it by themselves, concentrate on any one spot

UPLAND GAME BIRDS

HUNTERS ARE OUT IN THE FIELDS

u early fall the hunters are out in the upland fields, gunning for quail, grouse, pheasant, partridge. These are the upland game birds who live in dry open country Hunting them is different sport from the wet, chilly excitement of bagging waterfowl. Upland shooting is a sport of windy, sunny, open places. The hunter finds the keenest kind of pleasure tramping with his dog through the fall fields, flushing the wary birds out of the fence rows, the tall dry grass, the aster and goldenrod and hemlock and the clumps of bright.

Francis L. Jaques has painted for LIFE the bestknown of America's upland game birds. On the opposite page are grouse, which are considered big when they weigh as much as 2 lb., and quail, which rarely run more than half a pound. Most beautiful of the grouse is the ruffed grouse, shown here with its tail fanned out as it is during its intricate mating strut. All grouse have wonderful mating rituals. Most plentiful grouse is the prairie chicken which lives in open fields and is so easy to shoot that in some States it has almost been exterminated.

Quail are essentially birds of the tropics but they are numerous in the U.S. The most numerous of all is the bobwhite. One of the most widely hanted American game birds, it is loved for its pleasant song but has been so sadly overshot during the last few years that in some parts of the East it has become all but extinct.

Good gunning manners dictate firing only at birds directly in front of hunter. This cuts flown chances but pheasures are so plentiful in South Dakota hunters don't mind.

SOUTH DAKOTA IS WONDERFUL FOR PHEASANTS

The wild turkey is not strictly an upland bird and the ring-necked pheasant is not a native American bird but both are favorites of U. S. upland hunters. Imported from China, the ring-necked pheasant is coddled in the East where it is bred in preserves and the birds are let out only for hunting. But in eastern South Dakota, where LIFE took these photographs, the pheasants introduced only 28 years ago have thrived in the open country. They have multiplied so rapidly that, although nearly 2,000,000 are shot in the State every fall, their number still is increasing.

Bringing in the har, Peter Beaulieu of Winner, S. Dak., hardware merchant and vice chairman of the game commission, finds hands full so he carries one in his teeth.

HUNTERS FROM ALL OVER COME TO WINNER

During the past few years hunters have been more and more convinced that the best place for pheasant shooting in the U.S. is around Tripp County, South Dakota. Here hunters come from as far away as Texas and here the ringneck finds ideal conditions dry sandy soil, enough water, plenty of food in wheat stubble, corn, sweet clover, thistles. They get so thick in summer that even careful motorists run over them.

Winner, S. Dak, is the seat of Tripp County. When the hunting senson starts (the season: Oct 1-20, Nov. 15-29) everybody in Winner gets his shotgun and goes out. There is nothing very swank about Winner's shoots. The druggist goes out the first day while his assistant runs the store and the assistant goes out the second day while the druggist keeps store. The hunters drive out in their autos, stop when they find a likely field. Farmers, who like pheasants because they gobble up destructive grasshoppers, are usually very amiable about letting hunters into their fields. The hunters walk down the rows driving the birds before them. At the end of the rows the birds go up and the guns go off.

Pheasant's oggs are found in the stubble. It is distinctly unorthodox for a hen pheasant to lay eggs in autumn but it sometimes happens. Pheasants are not very smart.

Stars now build homes, live quietly and raise children

On these pages LIFE records the change that has come over Hollywood at the last few years. The days when the film capital was a papier-maché wonderland are over. Cone for the most part is the freak element of the movies, the fast, shady, phony, fly-by-night prefentionsness that once made Hollywood a cross between Babylon and a Wild West boom town

Today most Hollywood movie folk lead as solar, scrams hard working lives as their fellow citizens in Dubinque. Des Momes, Du Bois or Denver. Their homes, once gaudy and too ornate, are now as sensible and sound in taste as any in the country. No longer do they spend their big incomes on flashy autos, on rowdy midnight sprees. Some, like Bing Crosby and Reginald Denny, run private businesses on the sale. Some, like Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, have ranches in San Fernando Valley. Some, like Irone Dunne and Loretta Young, take pride a gardens. Some Tke Edward G. Robinson and Charles Laughton, collect art.

Most agnificant of all is the emergence of Holly-wood family life. To Bing Crosby, his greatest achievement is his four sons. Don Ameche has four boys too. The appearance of children in the homes of Norma Shearer, Joan Bennett, Joan Blondell, Loretta Yosaig and Ray Milland has given Hollywood a stability inconed varie a decade ago when a star who dared to have a child was ready for the ash can

Brenda Marshall has a long, busy workday

Fight-hour days are not the rule in Hollywood. The makers of movies, from director down to technician, work hard and long, with a singleness of will and a concentration of effort that would break all but the most determined. Writers often watch the dawn come up over the typewriters. Producers often plan the whole night through for next day's schedule. Directors sometimes cut their films around the clock, enting meals off trays and gulping benzedrine tablets to fight futigue. Actors are accustomed to twelve-hour shifts, plus extra preparation at night. Whole dinner parties have been known to rise and dash off to the studio at a call from Darryl Zanuck. For, when a movie costs a million dullars, a hotch, a slip, a day's delay may add thousands to the bill.

On these pages is documented a typical workday in the life of a typical starlet. Nineteen months ago Brends Marshall came to the Warner Brothers studio after acting in New York, where she married and had a daughter Since then she has scored in The Sca Hock with Errol Flynn, will appear this month in South of Sucz with George Brent and East of the River with John Carfield.

Brenda rises at 6, gets to the studio at 7. By 9, made up and costumed, she is on the set. At 12,30 she pauses for an hour's limeh. By 1,30 she has changed clothes, refreshed make-up and returned to acting. Between scenes she learns lines, tries on clothes, gives interviews, poses for publicity stills. By 7, when she arrives home, she is so tired that she drops on the sofa for a rest. Only rarely does she spend an evening out. For a girl who wants to scale the steep ladder of cinema success must study her roles at night and turn the lights out at 9:30.

Coffee, teast and grayefruit make Brenda Marshall's frugal breakfast soon after she rises at 6. She lives with her t-versal I daughter and a basis over a bound house just 3 minutes from the Warner Brothers studio.

While her bair is being sel at 7 a.m. by Hairdresser Doris Beyer, Brenda memorizes lines for the movie scenes that she will act during the day.

A scene on the set may last only a minute but often it is shot ten to 20 times. This is from Money and The Woman.

Hence every studio maintains a completely equipped gymnasium and an instructor to keep contract players in the place of her the Wase actors use it regularly during lunch hours or after work. Bing Crosby's family is perhaps Hollywood's best. This rare photograph, taken by George Strock, would have been inconceivable ten years ago, when it would have wrecked an actor's career. Besides being Hollywood's proudest father. Bing runs a horse rauch, a race track and an office building. The children are (left to right): Philip Lang, 6, Gury Evan, 7, Howard Landsay, 2 and Dennis Michael, Philip's twin. Like many movie children, they go to a military school. Mrs. Crosby is Dixie Lee, former blues singer and movie actress.

Belte Davis' knitting keeps her relaxed at the Warner Brothers studio between takes of All This, And Heaven Too. Like many Hollywood stars, she is rarely seen in public and never in hot spots. She spent her summer vacation building a country home at Sugar Hill, N. H.

Ray Milland's son, Daniel David, is his father's chief diversion off the set. When he isn't taking innumerable snapshots of his new heir, Mr. Milland makes model ships and airplanes with the help of his young brother-in-law in a perfectly equipped home workshop.

Lorelta Young's garden is a pleasant excuse for getting out in the sun and putter ing around in the ger rad during her few free hours at home. She confesses frankly that she is a "horts ultural dilettante," hardly knows one flower from another.

THIS CHART WILL HELP

The chart below was designed by Oswald B Lord to make it simple for the LIFE reader to keep score on the Presidential election next Tuesday night. As he gets returns over the radio and sets them down on this chart, the reader will know at a garage ow the race is going

At the left-hand side of the chart is the name of each State and the number of its electoral votes. Next is an "R" for Roosevelt, a "W" for Wilkie. In the next ten columns are figures representing the number of votes candidates may get. In the tenth column, at farthest right, is the number of votes which a candidate must get to win the State. To win all a State's electoral votes, a candidate must get just more than half the popular votes cast. These tenth-column figures, therefore, are half the total votes expected to be cast in each State, based on coters registrations or estimates made by the Associated Press. In Alabama, for mist new where 280,000 are expected to go to the polls, 140,000 votes will win the State's eleven electoral votes.

In k some the chart, use a heavy pencil. Better yet, use two colored pencils blue purhaps, for Roosevelt, and red for Wilkie. As the votes cone in, chart them by lines drawn from left to right opposite the names of the States. In Alabama, when Roosevelt gets 14,000 votes, draw a line out from the letter "R" to the 14,000 mark. When Willkie gets 14,000, draw a line opposite "W." Continue the line across until one candidate reaches the end column or 140,000 votes. Since he has won the State's eleven electoral votes, set down the figure 11 in the vertical column headed R or W at far right. As the results come in, the chart will resolve itself into a clear, developing picture of the position of the candidates.

Bear in mind the two maps printed here. On the opposite page is the U. S. distorted to show the importance of States according to electoral votes. New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California. Ohio are the biggest States. None is conceded to either candidate and upon them the election will probably hang.

The map at right shows which parts of the U. S. are steadfastly Democratic or Republican. The Solid South (Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, South Carolina, Mississippi, and usually Florida, Texas, Virginia, North Carolina) can be counted Roosevelt's. But watch the border States like Tennessee and Missouri, where a Willkie trend might be as significant as a Roosevelt trend in Maine or Vermont.

Changing allegiance of voters is shown in county-by-county map. Only in part of Solid South are many countries immovably Democratic; only in Northeast are many immovably Republican.

WHAT KIND OF AMERICA DO WE THE PEOPLE WANT?

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE SUMS UP HIS THOUGHTS by Wendell L. Willkie

In the post three months, Wendell Willkie has spoken about the issues of this compaign to more than 260 audiences, and by radio and the press he has reached America's literate millions. In this article he sums up, for the readers of LIFE, his thoughts on a new America.

The political platforms have been written. The candidates have stated the issues on which they are prepared to stand. In a few days we are going to the polls to give expression to our convictions. This is a declaration for those who believe in the American future.

I. WE WANT AN AMERICA THAT IS STRONG

We are at one and the same time the greatest industrial nation and the greatest agricultural nation in the world. Therefore our strength lies in production. This is the achievement of our past and the key to our future. This is the lifeblood of our soil and the goal of our enterprise.

Our history can be written in terms of the productive power of our hands and our brains. Year after year we have learned how to make each person more effective, each person more productive. We have built factories and laboratories, we have invented tools and instruments, we have discovered new materials and established whole new industries; all for the purpose of increasing the power of each of us to produce.

The result is that each individual in America, whether farmer, worker, foreman, or manager, is many times as productive as an individual in any other nation. Each of us can produce more in less time. Each can therefore earn more. And each can therefore buy more.

That is the secret of America. That is the reason for our standard of living. That is the explanation for our radios and automobiles, our telephones and iceboxes, our consumption of electric power, our abundance of clothing and of food

Until 1929 the progress toward abundance was almost constant. It was interrupted by depressions, but in a few years it was always resumed. This is because we never lost sight of the goal—the power of each of us to produce.

But we have never recovered from 1929. Our national income has never again reached the level of 1926. Millions of us have lost our carning power entirely, and we are told that these—the unemployed—will never go back to work.

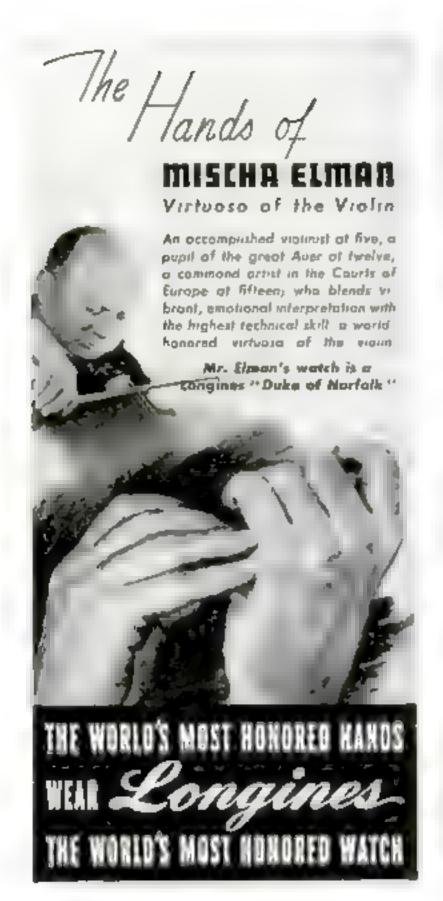

Just why they cannot get back to work has never been made clear to us. The United States has lagged behind every other important nation in its recovery from the depression of 1929. The official statistics of the League of Nations in 1939 placed us 17th in a line of 18 countries. Even Latvia did better than we

This we know: when we fail to produce, the delicate mechanism of our system breaks down. Its component parts split off. Geographical, social and racial groups divide, quarrel, and cast blame on one another. We become disunited. The strife destroys confidence. The failure of confidence further curtails production. More of us are deprived of the power to earn. We spiral downward toward the pit of discord

We know that we can get production going again. We want to rebuild our productive system from its foundations—and we know how to rebuild it. We want a government which knows how and which will help us.

The great advances of our national life all have their roots in production. Production increases our comforts, our facilities—yes, and our opportunities. It helps us in the pursuit of happiness. It gives us leisure and spare time. It opens the way to education and learning; to the arts and enjoyment of nature. It makes a strong America.

So we say to you who have forgotten the secret of America: let us turn again to the wheels and to the ploughs; let us increase beyond these arbitrary limits the power of each of us to produce, the power

World-honored, too, is the Longines watch. Ten world's fair grand prizes, 28 gold medals, and more honors for accuracy than any other time-piece have been won by Longines watches during the past 74 years. In 77 countries the world's most honored hands wear Longines, the world's most honored watch.

Featured Longines watches are the "Hall of Fame" series. of each of us to consume, the power of all of us to grow. Let us make a strong America.

II. WE WANT AN AMERICA THAT IS FREE

It is true that our land is rich in natural resources, yet these are not the measure of our wealth. Many other lands are rich in resources too. Russia's resources are comparable to ours. There are immense natural resources in parts of Africa, parts of South America, and perhaps even in China. And yet the wealth and earning power of America surpasses anything ever known to man

The wealth and earning power of America are the direct result of our political system. And the central idea of this political system is freedom—freedom of the individual. This freedom is embedded in certain fundamental rights that cannot be taken away from anybody. Among those rights are the rights of person and of property

Upon that foundation we can say that the state is not our master. We are the masters of the state. Our national government has limited powers; its basic purpose is to keep us from hurting one another, its design is such as to prevent any one man from acquiring control. The powers of each branch of this government are checked and balanced by the powers of the other branches

There is magic in this system. It set us free to use our property and our talents to our own advantage.

The result was that every man in America had an inducement to make use of our natural resources, to seize upon the discoveries of science, to develop his own talents to the utmost. Every man in America was encouraged to produce as much as possible and as well as possible

Sometimes we found that this free use of property was harmful to others; we therefore set up regulatory laws. But never, until recently, did we consider regulation more important than this freedom.

These two principles are inseparably linked: the productive power of each man in America, and the freedom of each man in America. A government that destroys our freedom destroys our productive power. And a government that tampers with our productive power tampers with our freedom.

The restrictions that the present Administration has placed on enterprise; the punitive taxation; the hostile attitude: all these have limited our freedom of adventure and lessened the inducements of production. Our market and our factories have ceased to grow

More than nine million of us have no jobs. They are unemployed. They are shut out from our productive system. They are barred from the opportunity to produce, to earn, to make for themselves happier lives. They have become bound in a new form of slavery.

We cannot have an America that is only partly free. We cannot be divided against ourselves

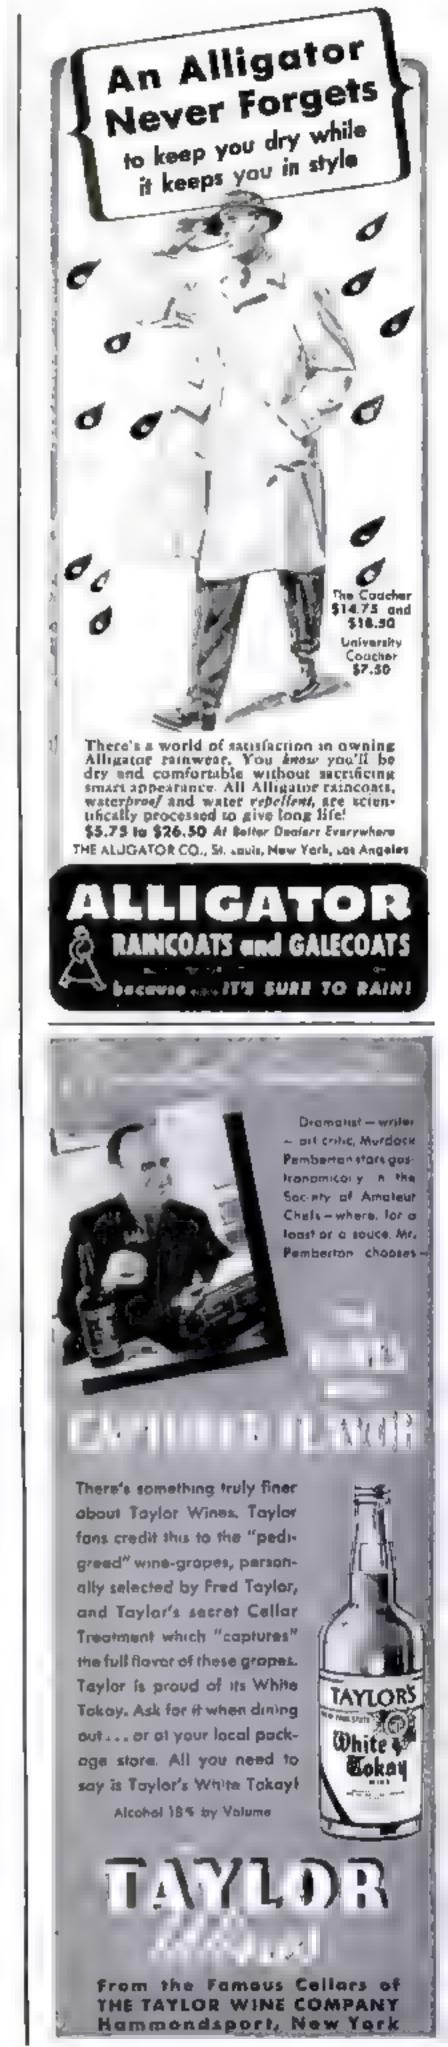

Once before we rose up as a people and fought our way out of a schism arising from the issue of slavery. We shall rise and fight again

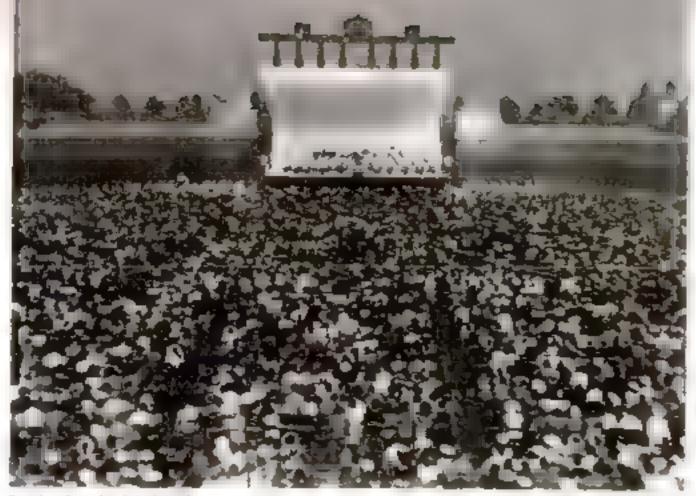

We call again for a leadership that will have faith in us, the people. We call again for a leadership that will set free our energies and our hopes, to build our future by our own initiative and our own enterprise. We call for a leadership dedicated before us and before God to end the slavery of idleness, to put our people back to work.

Our freedom cannot be confined. The horizons of our free America have always been and must forever be beyond the next frontier.

III. WE WANT AN AMERICA THAT IS RESPECTED

The world beyond our shores has changed in the last few years. People like ourselves who loved peace and freedom have been ruthlessly conquered. We know that we stand almost alone in a dangerous world.

In the Lewisohn Stadium in New York City as many as 10,000 people gather to hear great symphonics at low prices. But the popular base of culture can still be widered.

We say that part of this tragedy is the result of the mistaken policies of our own government. This government has never realized that we are the greatest economic force in the world. In weakening our productive power it helped to weaken that of other nations—just when they most needed to be strong.

We call for a new policy. We want to stand for peaceful trade, for the extension of economic freedom in a new world that must be built. Hitherto our trade has been best with those countries that have a high standard of living. We therefore favor doing everything we can to raise the standard of living—the productive power—of those nations which believe in our way of life.

We want to hold fast to this Dream—the new American Dream—during this present crisis.

But now the world is at war, and we must face that issue.

We want an America at peace. We are a peaceful people. We want no wars over other people's boundaries, or economic or racial disputes. We want no share in foreign balances of power. We will not send an expeditionary force to fight again on European soil.

But let no dictator dare to attack our soil or our freedom. If we are attacked we will fight to the last drop of our blood to defend America. We would rather die free than live enslaved. Let aggressors beware of us, and of our sister Republics in South and Central America, and of our neighbor, Canada. We shall appease no one.

And yet we cannot fight with words. Nor can our doughboys stand up against tanks and airplanes unprotected by tanks and airplanes of their own. To preserve our dignity and to preserve our peace we must build ourselves an air force, a navy, and an army that no one will dare to attack.

These we have not got—and it will take time to get them. We condemn this Administration for its failure to start work years ago in building up at least the facilities to manufacture modern military equipment. It had at its disposal army and navy plans; it had warnings from Europe; it knew from month to month the terrible deficiencies with which we are now faced.

We recognize that there exists around us a rim of freedom, held by the British people. At the moment it is desperately necessary for us to reinforce that rim. We will not reinforce it with an expeditionary force, nor do we believe that any attempt to do so would be of much help. But we must hurry to send over everything else that those heroic people can use.

The terrible problem with which we are faced is to produce enough to help the British and at the same time build our own defenses. This is a problem in production—which this Administration has never understood. We demand a government that will know how to stimulate our industries for the greatest productive job in history.

This, and this alone, will earn us the respect of dictators and aggressors. We are shocked by the empty threats and high-sounding words that have been issued in our name—threats and words that belittle our dignity because we cannot back them up.

We are troubled by whispers and rumors that we can neither believe nor disclaim; vague fears that our peace is being jeopardized, vil ispers of deals and secret agreements. We don't want our govern-

This Administration has talked a lot to the world but seldom to the representatives of the American people. We want an Administration that will work just the other way around. We want to earn the respect of other nations by talking little and making ourselves strong.

care for themselves. We believe strength to be synonymous with production. Maximum production would provide jobs for all. It would banish the specter of unemployment, which still, nine million times multiplied, walks among us.

We also demand of our government guarantees to make the lives of all our citizens secure. We regard these obligations of the state as the function of government to prevent some of us from hurting or exploiting others.

We demand the guarantee of collective bargaining for labor. We demand a just, efficient, impartial administration of the National Labor Relations Act. We demand the guarantee of a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours for all who labor, skilled and unskilled, organized and unorganized. Likewise we demand the guarantee of unemployment insurance. We demand social security, oldage pensions, care of the aged, the blind, the sick, and dependent children.

We demand the guarantee of Federal work relief for all those not employed by private industry; but we want a rapid reconstruction of our system of free private enterprise to the end that every American shall have a full share of our good life through the secure tenure of a real American job.

We repudiate the New Deal theory that unemployment is permanent, that no government can put all our jobless back on private payrolls. We say it can be done. We condemn the waste and the inefficiency that have squandered our money in the WPA. We condemn the discrimination and the political machination that have riddled the administration of relief. Above all we condemn a system which has enslaved millions of us to a political party; a system which plays on the fears of the insecure by trading bread for votes.

We demand for our farmers the benefits of a stable agricultural policy based on soil conservation, farm credit, rural electrification, and crop insurance—all to the end that the farmer shall have a greater share in our national income, a greater stake in our common prosperity.

We demand the security of a solvent government. The greatest of all our fears is the inevitable consequence of government borrowing and spending at the rate of the past seven and one-half years. We know that government bankruptcy results in totalitarian government. We want none of it. We know that all social legislation and all social security provision is worthless in a bankrupt state. There is no security in bankruptcy.

We want an America whose promises to us—social promises, financial promises, administrative promises—will be kept. We want an America that demands of us the industry, thrift, and enterprise, the toil and sweat, that made this country great. We want to work.

Work is our birthright.

Y. WE WANT AN AMERICA OF OPPORTUNITY

The Administration which asks us to return it for the third time to power has told us repeatedly that our country can grow no more. It has told us that our land is mature, that those who would build new industries might do us a disfavor, that the task of government is to administer the resources and plants now on hand.

We repudiate every tenet of such doctrine; we declare it to be

What Life Insurance Program for a man who needs extra protection for a limited time?

When a debt, a mortgage, or the responsibility of children in your family creates a need for additional temporary protection—term insurance is usually desirable. The premiums are low, and in The Prudential, you may take out term insurance policies for 10, 15 or 20-year periods as best fits your particular circumstances.

For a man like Ed Smith, with young children in his family, a desirable addition to his present life insurance program would be a Prudential Modified 20-Year Term policy.

Q: What exactly is The Prudential Modified 20-Year Term Policy?

A: It is a life insurance policy, issued in amounts of $5,000 or more, which gives you protection for 20 years. If you die during the 20 years, then The Prudential will pay the insurance money to your beneficiary. At the end of 20 years, you stop paying premiums and the life insurance protection ceases unless the policy is converted into permanent insurance.

Q: Why do you call this a "modified" policy?

A: Because it has a modified premium arrangement. During the first 3 years, the premiums are set 15% lower than during the final 17 years.

Q: What is the advantage of that?

- A: It means that you get low-cost protection right from the start. You see, at the end of the third year any dividends that are credited to your policy may be used to help offset the increase in the premiums. Thus the net premium payment remains at all times as low as possible consistent with safety.
- Q: And how do the premiums compare with those on a whole-life policy?
- A: Because the protection is temporary instead of permanent, and because a term policy does not have cash and loan values, the premium rate is lower than on a whole-life policy.

Q: Can the insurance be continued after the 20 years are over?

A: At any time during the 20 years, you may convert this policy to a whole-life policy without a medical examination. Of course, the premiums on your new policy would be higher.

Term policies represent just one of the many types of Prudential Life Insurance policies designed for a particular situation. There is a Prudential policy to fit every life insurance need . . . and a Prudential premium-payment plan to fit every purse. For further information on how your particular life insurance problem can be solved, see your local Prudential representative, or write the Home Office.

false to every belief and every practice that have made us the great nation that we are.

We are a young people and a vigorous people blessed with a young and incalculably rich land. We have the mightiest industrial energy of any people on earth, the greatest capital resources, the most productive labor, the most brilliant and daring scientific minds, the wealthiest area of free trade, unlimited natural resources, and that most priceless treasure of man upon this earth—our freedom

We do not deal in windy theories when we make our social demands upon our Government. We know that no Federal Government can make good these guarantees without the real wealth necessary to realize them. That wealth will not come from spending and lending, from billions of new debt piled upon the almost fifty billions that now confront us. That wealth will come from working and producing, from the flow of idle capital into our stagnant economy; from the labor of millions of hands and brains eagerly waiting at the gates of opportunity.

Are there no such gates? Only a blind man could miss them.

Just in bringing our present plant up to date there are millions of opportunities. America has become a land of old houses, old railroad equipment and old machinery. These are basic industries which create jobs elsewhere when they revive

Then there are new industries. Our Government does not seem to realize that we have made more scientific progress during the last ten years than ever before in history. New inventions and processes are piled up in our laboratories waiting for someone to release the capital that is piled up in our banks. The only thing that will release this capital for these inventions is a new administration with confidence in us, in our energies, in our inventiveness, in our creative power.

Besides the new inventions there are young industries like aviation, which is on the threshold of a vast development. There is television, which Government bureaucracy has throttled. There is the chemical industry, which will build us a new world if only we will release it. A new rubber industry waits for development. We shall have new markets for our farms; a new textile industry; and vast expansion in the use of electric power

Far from being finished, this world of ours is on the verge of a new transformation-a transformation that may carry us as far as we have already come since our country was founded. But to get this transformation we must have a government that will release our energies

To this new world we call our youth. We say to them, beware of hopelessness. Stand by us. Help us to defend our freedom. Our freedom is your freedom. And you will need your freedom to build that world.

VI. WE WANT AN AMERICA THAT IS UNIFIED

When our nation is growing, when our opportunities are infinite and varied, when there is a demand for men and a demand for capital, then it is easy for all of us to work together. Under those circumstances each man's interest furthers the other man's interest; the profit of one is the profit of all; each profit opens up new opportunities for profit; each job makes more jobs.

But when there is a ceiling on industrial growth; when opportunity is restricted and jobs are few, then each man's self-interest begins to work against that of the other man. Bitter jealousies are born. Men form into antagonistic groups, each trying to cut the throat of some other group Labor divides against capital and capital against labor. The society begins to break up into warring classes. And in these periods of depression, in spite of our traditions, and in spite of the strong protection of our civil liberties, even racial groups are formed, each accusing the other of sinister crimes.

In these times, we believe, it is all too easy for politicians to exploit this war to their own advantage. Playing one group off against another, or one class off against another, they make votes for themselves on imaginary issues and emotional attitudes

We in America have never reached that stage of demoralization. Yet we believe that the depression of the last eleven years, in creating millions of unemployed and strangling business opportunity, is rapidly pushing us in that direction. We have seen the European democracies fail, and we know that the cause of their downfall was not entirely external. They fell within themselves. They were weakened by dissension, doubt and hesitation, and by all those conflicting forces generated by free men when opportunity and jobs and confidence are taken away from them

We must punish traitors and enemies in our midst who can be

This month finds Pratt & Whitney Aircraft swinging full blast into the biggest job in its history. 17,000 aircraft engines must be delivered to the United States Army and Navy under the National Defense program.

A real challenge . . . but Pratt & Whitney is meeting it. In three swift plant expansions, its production rate, as shown by the chart, has already been quadrupled in the past eighteen months!

Most of this expanded output has been going to Great Britain. So, weeks ago, long before these additional 17,000 engines were actually ordered, a fourth major expansion was initiated. When this program is completed, Pratt & Whitney's daily production will be more than 8 times the rate for early 1939... an eloquent example of the vigor and resourcefulness of the nation's aircraft industry in meeting the double demand at home and abroad.

proved to plot against us. We must stand guard against the Fifth Column, wherever it may start to form. But vengeance and witch-hunting will not protect us, hatred will not protect us. We must do something more than put the Fifth Columnists in jail.

It is a positive faith we need, an affirmative stand, a mighty proof of America

We must bring our people back together. For this the responsibility lies with each one of us. Each one of us must in some measure deliberately examine his own jealousies and prejudices. Each group must find with its rival group some area of agreement within which both may operate. Specifically, the practice of collective bargaining should become, immediately, a creative force to establish contracts and understandings of benefit to both capital and labor.

But we cannot accomplish this by ourselves. We need leadership. We need a leadership that believes in us; a leadership that understands the great resources that are within us when we work together

Such a leadership must be confident of the American future. It must understand production, it must know how to put us back to work

We know that we must build the strongest defense armaments on earth to keep aggression from our shores. But we also know that before one new gun is mounted or one new ship launched or one new soldier trained, we must have a greater and more formidable defense. We must have the greatest of all defenses, the defense which is the strongest armor of the incredible British; the defense of a unified nation. We must have a nation united in spirit, in action, in will, in loyalty, in militant determination that American democracy shall not go the way that the continental democracies of Europe have gone.

VII. WE WANT AN AMERICA THAT IS ENLIGHTENED

We have built our democracy on the foundation of liberal and universal education. Nothing shall undermine this foundation; nothing shall darken the windows of our children's minds. We know the processes of tyranny; we know that barbarism entrenches itself through perverting the minds of children. We shall keep our schools and universities free; and we shall keep our children in them throughout their youth

For all our people we hold the aims of basic security; the security of food, clothing, and shelter; of insurance against old age and want, of care for those who cannot help themselves. Beyond those basic securities lies the good life. We expect an ever-widening share in that life for all our people

We expect to enjoy more widely the inspirations and pleasures of the arts. Literature, music and the graphic arts have grown vastly in the appreciation of our people; they shall grow more. We intend that culture and the good life shall not be the prerogative of any group, class, or section; they shall be available for the free choice of all. We hold that our culture is a measure of our freedom. Our books, our theater, our architecture, our music, our sculpture and our painting are among the arts of peace which will shape a better world.

It seems to us altogether proper that the Federal Government should give encouragement to our cultural efforts. We would not confine such encouragement to projects for the relief of the unemployed. We would extend it in the form of grants-in-aid to communities throughout the nation who desire to build instruments and instruments for public enlightenment and culture. We hold that each State or each city is best equipped to know and meet the cultural wants of its citizens.

We hold that the essence of American life is every individual's freedom to enjoy it in his own way. This may mean the symphony, or it may mean football games. It may mean traveling art shows and the fine teaching program of the Toledo Art Museum; or it may mean the radio. It may mean access to the treasures of our public libraries, or it may mean the movies. For most of us it means a taste of all these things and many more. It means the freedom to express ourselves in the many moods of our varied regions and peoples

It is our dream to open to all our people the way to the enjoyment of life. We can do this only if we produce, only if we are creative. Only through jobs which we hold securely; through leisure that is not idleness; through wages that buy us more—much more—than the necessities of life, can we enjoy the good life of enlightenment, of enjoyment, and of American freedom of choice.

VIII. WE WANT AMERICA FOREVER

We want the America that we know and love and trust—the America whose name means Liberty. We want for ourselves and for our children the Republic formed by our Constitution, served by George Washington, counseled by Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Jackson; the Republic saved by Abraham Lincoln. We want an America guided today and tomorrow, as it was guided yesterday, by the spirit of those men.

We have in this year of 1940 a deep responsibility to ourselves, to posterity, and to civilization. We know that if American democracy perishes now, democracy will perish from this earth. Only by wisdom, only by prudence, only by reverence for American tradition, and by understanding of American problems, can we guide our beloved country through the dangers of a world in flames

We can do it through strength. We can do it through faith. We can do it through unity under trusted leadership. We can do it through a sense of moral responsibility and a willingness to sacrifice. We are not ashamed in our cause to speak those words and invoke those vows which in most men's hearts he too deeply buried for utterance. We are a crusade; we are a declaration of faith; and like other defenders of faiths we are indifferent to scoffers, to cynics, and to ridicule

Our cause is the vow to preserve American democracy. We are aroused. We are pledged. We are sworn to preserve the land of liberty that was laboriously built and devotedly handed on to us. We are sworn to hold the torch of Liberty on high; we are sworn to keep it burning. We are the sons and daughters of the English who set forth to hardship in the wilderness for the love of freedom. Of the French who fled from tyranny to a new land of liberty. Of the Dutch who sought for peaceful trade. Of the wise and gentle men of Heidelberg and Leipzig and Göttingen, whose dream of freedom we have cherished in the new world

We are the sons and daughters of men from the dark continent who, for their sufferings, have rewarded us with songs and faith. We are the children of the valuant people of the North who till our great free lands. We are the children of the devout Irish who came to build our cities. Of the men and women from the land of Dante who brought us laughter and their willing toil. We are the sons and daughters of seekers of freedom who streamed from the ghettos of Kiev and Kovno and Lodz and Vilna to make our clothes and play our music and keep our shops. We are the children of the brawny Slavs who sweated out our miracle of industry in the furnaces and pits and mines and smelters.

We are the American people; we are mighty and terrible and aroused. We will keep this country we have built; we will keep it or we will die for it. We will march as we marched before to the battle for our unity, saying with Lincoln, our most beloved leader: "We will nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope on earth."

Streamlined trains are new but few. This picture of a streamlined coach bitched to an old-style train is significant. Replacement of old rolling stock would create many jobs.

- THE MILE VALLEY where the heaviest fighting of the winter may take place.

TIME-readers know these are no ordinary maps

THEY belp you see the country as if you were looking down on it from an observation balloon—and help you understand the military movements of men and tanks and ships and planes all over the world.

Prepared by America's leading cartographer-artists under the direction of the Editors of Time, everything unessential has been stripped away to emphasize militarily important physical features—in accordance with Time's 17-year-old purpose of making the significant aspects of the news quickly and vividly understandable.

The maps themselves measure 17 by 11½—are printed in their full original colors with accompanying text—and are so bound in the Atlas that they may be removed for framing without defacing.

To keep the price so low, they are reprinted from the original plates used in TIME—which can withstand only a limited number of additional impressions. Consequently, the ran will be small—and interested readers should get their copies of the Atlas early.

THESE ARE THE THINGS THAT PEOPLE THREW AT CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT

went around this country twelve years ago," said Al Smith last week. "The Lord knows I met an awful lot of people that hated me... but, outside of burning some crosses along the line of the railroad tracks, they treated me courteously.... Tell me what has happened in this country that a lovely American lady like Mrs. Wilkie can't accompany her husband in a crusade to save this country without being spattered with eggs!"

Other Presidential candidates, from Lincoln down, have been reviled and slandered, but not within memory has a major candidate been pelted with missiles by his fellow Americans. Below, LIFE has collected and photographed duplicates of all the things thrown at Wendell Willkie up to Oct. 26.

Mostly Willkie took his beating with a grin but when an egg hit him on the temple in Chicago and another spattered on Mrs. Willkie's dress, he lunged toward the man who threw the egg, his eyes blazing with anger. Moment later he recovered his temper.

Democratic bigwigs deplored the boodlum violence, as well they might for it was winning Willkie votes. But Al Smith laid it directly to the New Deal's "setting up of class against class."

FOR THE 1 MAN IN 7 WHO SHAVES EVERY DAY

A Special Shave Cream — It Needs No Brush — Not Greasy!

Daily shaving leaves many men's faces raw, sensitive. This is especially true of the man who, because of his business and social status, must shave every day.

To meet this condition, Wilhams, for 100 years makers of fine shaving preparations, has now developed GLIDER—a special cream for daily shavers. Without the usual soap base, it's a complete departure from ordinary shave creams. No brush. No lather. Not sticky or greasy.

A superabundance of moisture in this rich cream softens each whisker, yet forms a protective layer over your face to keep blade from scraping. Swiftly, gently your razor glides over your skin. Like a cold cream, Glider helps smooth, soften your skin and prevent chapping and roughness.

Free-tube of Glider. Send name, address today. The J. B. Williams Co., Dept. CG-22, Glastonbury, Conn. Offer good in U. S. A. and Canada only.

"I EAT PLENTY YET I'VE GOT NO STEAM!"

Food of the right kind is as necessary to a dog as to a human. Spratt's contain wheat for stamma, meet for energy, and are crisp baked to safeguard teeth and digestion. That's the true dog diet you get in Spratt's Meat-Fibrine Biscuit Foods. One pound is equal in feeding value to two pounds of lean meat. Spratt's are economical, too, for they contain a minimum of moisture — you pay for food.

Ask for Spratt's FIBO (granulated), SPIX (bone size), OVALS or ASSORTED BISCUITS. Feed your dog this world-famous food and watch results.

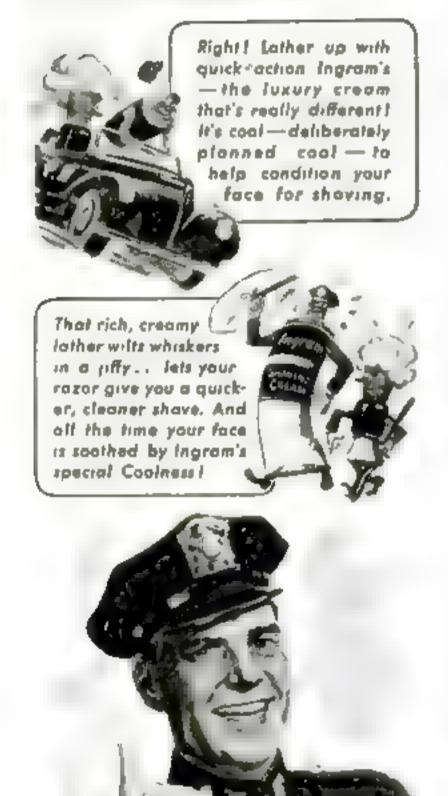

Cool Shaves

Men! Say "hello!" to cool and soothing Ingram's...and say "good-bye!" to hot and irritating shaves!

Change to Ingram's now...for cool, quick, easy shaves. Ingram's leaves your face refreshed for hours—more attractive looking, too. No lotion needed. In tube or jar—the same cooling, economical cream.

Even before he is dressed, Willkie waves from back platform at Beloit, Wis. Reporters on the train groun to find the cambridate making news long before they are up.

WILLKIE'S DOGGED CAMPAIGN TIRES OUT HIS FOLLOWERS AND SENDS UP THE BETTING ODDS

Americans, it is his dogged perseverance. Said one reporter on his train: "This train has a peculiar liking for spur lines and rusty tracks. That is because Wilkie is reaching for the grass-roots people as well as the city people. This guy is out to save America. That's why he will stand up in the back of an open automobile for four hours at a time while people throw confetti—and other things—at him. That's why he won't make Fourth of July speeches and why he ignores Mrs. Wilkie when she pulls him by the coat-tails and begs him to sit down and rest a spell. That's why he can go to bed absolutely dog-tired and he up the next morning before anyone else, out on the rear platform telling the crowds: 'I never felt better in my life.' This guy has golden guts."

Betting adds on Willkie rise in every town he visits. This is the famous odds board at the M & M in Butte, on Oct. 23, a month after William train had gone through.

ARTIST Norman Rackwell SAYS

Growing numbers of my guests appreciate a chance to say, I'll take WINE'

With meals, serve a "table" wine, red or white as you prefer. Table wines are made "dry" (not sweet) especially to complement the flavor of man-course dishes. With your dinner, in portions about half the size of a water glass, try:

Sauterne which is golden, refreshing and delicate in flavor, goes well with chicken, fish or any mildly flavored main-course dish

With refreshments or desserts, serve a "awast" wine . . . rich with the natural sweetness of the grape. For casual entertaining, or at any afternoon or evening affair, bring on small glasses of: Muscatel, which is the color of old gold, full bodied, richly endowed with the unique flavor of Muscat grapes - a delictous beverage with cakes or cookies

"People find they need to relax and enjoy themselves, and almost everyone wants to stay on the moderate side"

Ty recent months," writes Norman Rockwell, I "more of my guests than ever before have been selecting wine as their beverage.

"I think the reason is simple. People want to let up, to get a few hours of relaxation. And yet in times like these almost all of us prefer a moderate kind of evening."

Hosts and hostesses in all sections report as Mr. Rockwell does. More and more people like a chance to say "make mine wine." Prefer wine because it is a moderate beverage,

Why don't you try it next time you have guests for dinner, or when friends drop in during the evening?

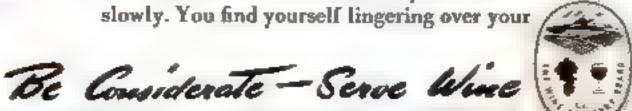

You'll notice folks like to sip their wine slowly. You find yourself lingering over your glass as a connoisseur does—savoring a bouquet and flavor that is delicately satisfying. You discover no urge to bolt wine down.

Good wine is thrifty to buy these days, and delightfully easy to serve. There are some interesting, easy-to-follow suggestions in the panel at the left.

THE WINES OF CALIFORNIA:

In the most discriminating households the good wines of our own country are usually served today. Actually more than 9 in every 10 Americans who serve wine choose wines grown here. The wines of California, for example, are grown to strict standards of quality. They are true to type. Well developed, Inexpensive.

ROCKNE LEARNED SHIFT FROM CHORUS

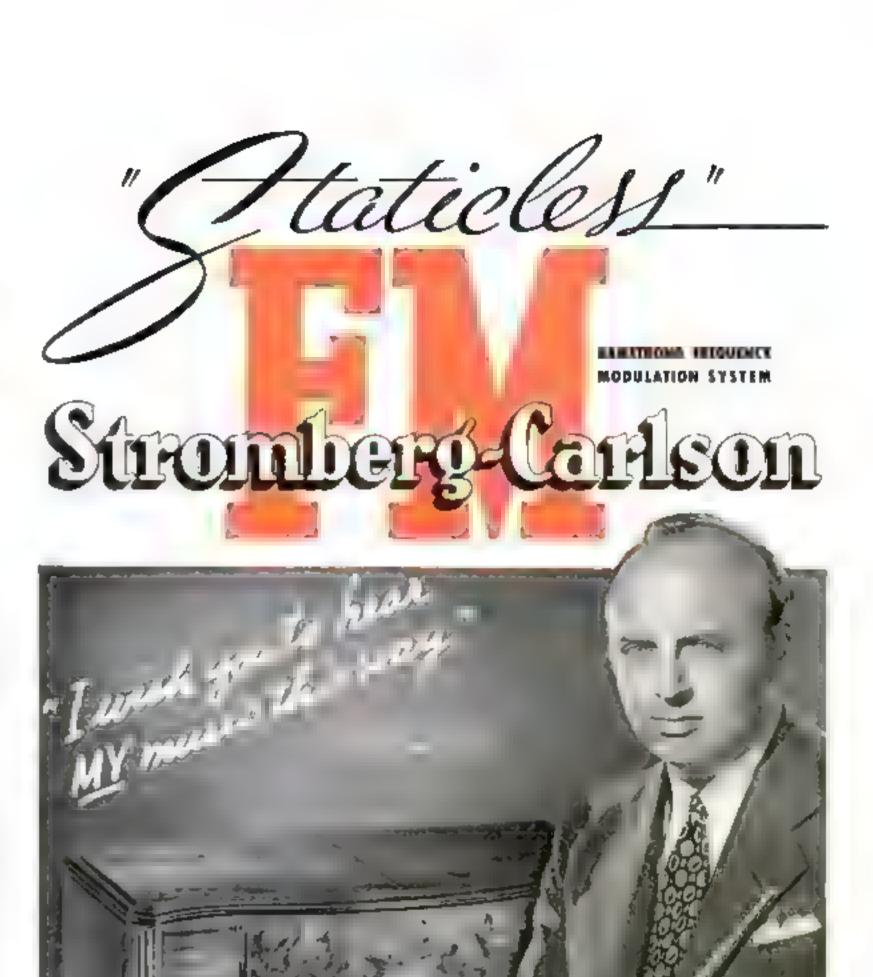

To football, Knute Rockne is more than a legendary tactician who produced the nation's greatest teams a decade and a half ago. His name conjures up all the glamor of the golden era of U. S. sport. Warner Bros.' new movie, Knute Rockne-All American, is a faithful though uninspired record of "The Rock's" life from his birth in Norway to his death in an airplane crash. Oddest sidelight in the film (and a true one) is that which shows how the Chester Hale Girls suggested one of Rockne's greatest plays. To reward his team for hard practice, Rockne takes them to a Broadway musical. They are amused to see how intently he watches the chorus dance. He takes an envelope from his pocket and pencils some notes. That night he cries: "The girls gave me an idea for a new kind of backfield shift." Using this new shift, Notre Dame's famed Four Horsemen ride to their great victories of 1922-24.
